Everybody is expecting with great encouragement the next 44th European Senior Championships 2009 to be held in Zagreb. The Croatian Karate Union has become in the last years an outstanding member not only of the European, but also from the World Karate Federation, and both in the sporting side as well in the structure and capacity of the Federation

The Croatian Karate Union is in fact a model of efficiency and well doing. It has always been a pleasure to work with them, and in all the before mentioned I want to make a special mention to President Stjepan Čelan that has always made things easy inside a positive atmosphere of mutual help and collaboration with the European Karate Federation as regards the preparations of these 2009 Championships.

The celebration of such a major event in Croatia is something well deserved by the Croatian Karate Union, and I can say, without any doubt, that these 44th European Senior Championships are going to be a new success of our sport in the Continent, and also a new success of the European Karate Federation thanks to the inestimable contribution of one of its outstanding members.

EKF President

44th European Karate Championships - Zagreb, May 8th - 10th 2009

Welcome to Zagreb

We are honoured and pleased to invite you to the 2009 European Karate Championships in Zagreb, Croatia's capital, which will take place from 8 to 10 May 2009.

These Championships will be an opportunity to display once again the beauty of this sport which brings together athletes from all over Europe, and connects countries both off and on the tatami. It will also be an opportunity for the citizens of Zagreb to show their hospitality, and for spectators to express once again their support and enthusiasm.

A Brief History of Zagreb

Today's Zagreb has grown out of two medieval settlements that had been developing for centuries on the neighbouring hills. The first written mention of the city dates from 1094, when a diocese was founded on Kaptol, while in 1242 - neighbouring Gradec was proclaimed a free and royal city. Both settlements were surrounded by high walls and towers, the remains of which are still preserved.

During the Turkish onslaughts on Europe, between the 14th and 18th centuries, Zagreb was an important border fortress. The Baroque reconstruction of the city in the 17th and 18th centuries changed the appearance of the city. The old wooden houses were demolished and opulent palaces, monasteries and churches were built. Many trade fairs, revenues from landed estates and offerings of many craft workshops greatly contributed to the wealth of the city. Affluent aristocratic families, royal officials, church dignitaries and rich traders from all over Europe moved into the city. Schools and hospitals were opened, and the ways of European capitals were adopted.

44th European Karate Championships - Zagreb, May 8th - 10th 2009

The city outgrew its medieval borders and spread to the lowlands. The first parks and country houses were built. Zagreb affirmed its position as the administrative, cultural and economic centre of Croatia.

When Kaptol, Gradec and the surrounding settlements were administratively integrated into the City of Zagreb in 1850, its development became even faster. The disastrous earthquake of 1880 sparked off the reconstruction and modernization of many shabby neighbourhoods and buildings. Prestigious public buildings were erected, parks and fountains created, and transportation and other infrastructure built.

In the 19th century the population increased tenfold. The twentieth century brought the Secession style to Zagreb. It was a rich civil society, with firm links with all central European centres. With an increased wealth and the growth of industry from the 1960s on, the city spread out over the wide plains alongside the Sava River, where a new, contemporary business city developed, ready to face the challenges of the third millennium.
